At CU Boulder, history graduate students are trained in the central principles and research methods that characterize the discipline of history through class instruction and professional development seminars. They also gain a thorough grounding in their particular geographical area of study as well as an ability to situate that area of study in a larger global context.

All history graduate students focus their studies in two equally weighted fields:

• a regional/national field (i.e., American/U.S. history, European history or Asian history); and
• a global/thematic field, for which students are required to take a variety of courses that examine global and transnational history through specific thematic lenses.

For the purposes of the comprehensive examination (portfolio), students are expected to work with their faculty advisors to craft subfields of emphasis within both the regional/national and global/thematic fields.

For more information, visit the department's Graduate Students webpage.
