RELIGIOUS STUDIES - MASTER OF ARTS (MA)

The curriculum in the Department of Religious Studies at CU Boulder trains students in the scholarly understanding and interpretation of the complex phenomenon we call religion through careful study of history, texts, rituals, narrative, art and media. The program offers the skills to approach the comparative study of religion with the option of gaining deeper knowledge in one religious tradition, such as Buddhism, Christianity, Daoism, Hinduism, Islam and Native American traditions.

The graduate degree in religious studies emphasizes the application of various theoretical and methodological approaches to the study of religion; the understanding of religious practices and traditions with attention to historical context and present-day impact; and the development of media literacy, critical thinking, effective oral and written communication, and research skills in our increasingly globalized and religiously diverse world.

In addition, students with a degree in religious studies are expected to achieve basic religious literacy: the ability to communicate and analyze practical information regarding religious diversity as educated citizens of a pluralistic society and thereby to effectively understand and participate in public debates and discussions about religion.

Dual Degree Program

The Department of Religious Studies also participates in a dual master’s degree program with the Departments of History and Asian Languages and Civilizations. Students interested in exploring this option should contact the graduate director of the department for specific requirements.

Requirements

Course Requirements

The student must successfully complete 31 credit hours of academic work, at least 24 of which must be completed at the 5000 level or above. Up to 9 credit hours of course work may be taken outside the department or transferred from another accredited institution, consistent with the student’s special needs and interests and with the advisor’s approval. Independent study credit hours shall not exceed six credit hours.

A graduate degree represents the mastery of a significant body of knowledge and interpretation within an academic discipline. A degree is not granted merely because a student completes a specific number of courses. The student is expected to acquire both breadth and depth in religious studies.

Breadth is achieved by satisfying two types of course requirements as set forth below, which include exposure to a diversity of approaches to the study of religion. Depth is achieved through three courses in a particular area or approach and by independent work related to the thesis or concentration.

A student who has not completed at least 12 credit hours, or the equivalent, of undergraduate academic course work directly related to the study of religion will be required to do remedial work to make up this deficit before beginning graduate study or, with the director of graduate studies’ permission, after beginning the program. This can be done by attaining a grade of B or better in an appropriate 2000- or 3000-level course taken within the first year. Remedial courses may not be counted toward the degree.

Courses for each term must be approved by the student’s faculty advisor and be in compliance with the requirements of the Graduate School where necessary. In order to register for any given term, the student must have the course of study for that term approved in writing by the advisor on the student’s Record of Progress Toward the MA Degree Form. No changes can be made to registration without the advisor’s approval.

Foreign Language Requirement

In order to receive the degree a student must meet the foreign language requirement. The student must have a satisfactory reading knowledge of a language other than English, demonstrated by a B or better in the fourth semester of the language.

Residency Requirement

All students must fulfill the residency requirement. In general this can be fulfilled by either two full-time semesters or four part-time semesters of study. A full-time program is defined as 5 credit hours of course work at the 5000 level or higher, 8 credit hours of total course work or at least one credit hour of thesis research.

Degree Plans

In the final semester of graduate study, which must be taken in residence, students will select either a thesis or non-thesis research option.

Plan I: Thesis Option

Students selecting the thesis option will take a 4-credit thesis course (RLST 6950), which will culminate in the completion and defense of a thesis.

Plan II: Non-Thesis Option

Students selecting the non-thesis option will take a 4-credit directed readings course on secondary scholarship in a specific field (theoretical topic, geographic area or religious tradition) that will culminate with a written examination on the topic that the student must pass.

Comprehensive Examination

A final oral comprehensive examination, given by the student’s research committee, will focus on three substantial term papers and either the thesis or the written examination in a specific field.
