DISTANCE EDUCATION

Distance Education

The University of Colorado Boulder offers master's degrees, graduate certificates, and individual graduate courses online in several disciplines.

Students may enroll in a single course, in a graduate certificate, or in a full master's degree program at CU Boulder. Students applying for admission to a degree program may enroll in courses as non-degree students before being accepted, but should apply for admission before finishing a third course. Courses taken before admission are considered transfer credit. A maximum of nine hours of transfer credit will be accepted toward degree requirements once a student is admitted into that program.

For more information, visit the Graduate School website (https://www.colorado.edu/graduateschool/admissions/programs-0/#distance-hybrid) and contact the individual graduate program of interest directly.
