

BRITISH AND IRISH STUDIES - CERTIFICATE

Undergraduates interested in the literature, history and culture of Britain and Ireland are encouraged to develop an interdisciplinary concentration in British and Irish studies. Completed in addition to a regular departmental major, this work will lead to a certificate in British and Irish studies. The certificate demonstrates that the student has done serious work in several aspects of British and Irish studies and will be advantageous when applying to graduate school or for jobs. It is open to students in any school or college.

Requirements

A total of 24 credits in British and Irish studies (normally eight courses of 3 credits each) with a grade of C- or better in all classes.

The courses should be distributed as follows:

- In the department of primary focus (either English or history, depending on the student's own interests), any four courses in British or Irish studies. CBIS will provide a list of possible courses (see below).
- In the secondary department (either history, English or political science, depending upon primary area), a minimum of two courses and a maximum of four courses. CBIS will provide a list of possible courses (see below). Topics courses may be substituted with approval of the director.
- Students may take one or two courses in departments other than English, history or political science, chosen from the list below, in place of courses in the secondary department. Students are encouraged to do some work of an explicitly interdisciplinary nature such as team-taught courses offered by two departments or an independent study or honors thesis spanning two disciplines.
- Studying in Britain or Ireland would be a fine addition to the certificate. Contact the Office of International Education, Center for Community S355, 303-492-6016, for information on CU's Study Abroad programs.
