

CRITICAL SPORTS STUDIES - CERTIFICATE

Critical sports studies—which examines sports and their social, cultural, historical and economic contexts—is a rapidly growing interdisciplinary and intersectional field that engages cultural studies, the humanities, social sciences and professional fields such as business and law. At CU Boulder, critical sports studies is a multifaceted discipline that addresses the growing interest in society to examine social and cultural issues in sports today. Critical sports studies is also making great strides in understanding how sport and play function in everyday interactions and how it can be harnessed to support social and cultural change.

The certificate in critical sports studies is open to all degree-seeking undergraduate students pursuing any major at CU Boulder. The program framework demands that students analyze race, gender, class and nation as they study sports, preparing students to engage in an increasingly diverse and globalized society. Students also participate in co-curricular activities to augment their understanding of the development, focus, functioning, and future of sports in society.

Requirements

Admission Requirements

Applications for admission into the certificate program will be reviewed once each semester. Degree-seeking undergraduate students may apply before they begin coursework, while they are engaged in it, or after they have completed certificate requirements.

Required Courses and Credits

A total of 18 hours of coursework are required to complete the certificate. Students are encouraged to take advantage of the interdisciplinary course offerings based in cultural studies, political science, history, study abroad, journalism, philosophy, communications, and writing and rhetoric.

All students are required to take ETHN 3024 Introduction to Critical Sports Studies. At least 6 additional credits must be taken within the Department of Ethnic Studies for a minimum total of 9 credits within ETHN.

The remaining 9 credits must be taken in other departments and in other disciplines. Alternately students may take 6 credits in other departments plus 3 credits from an experiential learning course such as the Education Abroad Summer Seminar: ETHN 3704 Athlete as a National Symbol: Nationhood/Nationalism, Sport (offered annually).

A grade of C- or higher is required to count a class toward the certificate. Students must achieve a minimum GPA of 2.0 in certificate coursework in order to earn the degree.
