

COMMUNICATION

In the Department of Communication, students learn about communication practices that underlie all of our social interactions, both in face-to-face interaction and in new forums, such as social media. The department is a vibrant community of scholars who share a commitment to excellence and innovation in communication research and teaching.

Our undergraduate degree blends the best of a broad, liberal arts education with practical skills that contribute to career and life success. We also offer a minor in communication.

Students will acquire broad knowledge in communication, including:

- Communication contexts (e.g., interpersonal, group, organizational, public, intercultural and digital).
- Ethical issues and responsibilities of communication practice.
- Fostering and supporting inclusive and just communities.
- History of communication and rhetorical study.
- Implications for shifting communication technologies.
- Methods for investigating communication problems.

Students will also acquire the skills and abilities to:

- Design innovative and influential messages.
- Develop inclusive and responsible communication practices.
- Analyze and critique communication processes.
- Build quality relationships and interactions.

Course code for this program is COMM.
